THE ROANOKE TIMES WRONG

In an editorial sometime ago, the Roanoke Times, in discussing the four amendments to the Constitution to be voted on this fall, says in part: "The next amendment proposes to take the appointment of commissioners of the revenue from the circuit judges and give it to the people. This should be voted down, also." Commissioners of the revenue are now elected by the people. They will be so elected next year. The question is not, whether they shall be elected or appointed, but whether, in either case they may succeed themselves in office or not. If this proposed amendment carries the fellows elected next year may succeed themselves indefinitely in office. If it is defeated, as our contemporary says it should be, they cannot succeed themselves in office. If this amendment carries the commissioners elected next year can be reelected as often as they can secure the necessary number of votes. So, we hope our "big brother" will now understand, that the amendment does not propose "to take the appointment from the judges." They haven't the appointment of these officers now. It is not remarkable that the big daily should slip, for Homer nodded. It may be just a little mean, but this "small fry" takes special delight in calling this big fry down. The Clinch Valley News was one of the first, if not the very first, paper in the State to call attention to these amendments editorially, which it did a long time ago. If the editors of the Times and Times Dispatch, and some of the others "supreme" in the State, would, even occasionally lead the Clinch Valley News, they would be better and wiser, and not make such egregious mistakes, as they sometimes do. We have a well established kindergarten department, in which instruction is given editors of daily papers free.

THEIR DAYS ARE DONE

The Georgia Democrats have started the ball rolling in the South, and other states will likely keep it going as opportunity is afforded. Two congressmen were recently defeated for re-election, one of whom had served his state many years in Washington. They were turned down because of their vote on the tariff schedule. These gentlemen were elected on a Democratic platform which declared for free lumber, hides, etc., and then, afterwards voted with Uncle Joe Cannon, Aldrich and Co., for just the opposite thing, and the boys remembered it at home. And there are a few in Virginia who should be remembered also. Mr. Stemp, of the Ninth District, is in the same pew, and will hear something drop about November 8th, and so should every man, be he Democrat or what not, who stood and voted with that high tariff gang in the last congress.

Henry Stuart is a Democrat, and every true Democrat is against high taxes, and believes in giving every man, rich and poor, an equal chance before the law. He is levelheaded and honest, and knows the truth and will stand by it through thick and thin.

CHARITY

Mrs. Morse is carrying and sending around a petition to get her husband out of the penitentiary. He stole some money, wrecked a bank, using the money of thousands of confiding depositors, in gambling and riotous living. Hundreds of people will sign it. A poor woman comes around with a petition to get her husband pardoned for drinking or stealing a ham, or other trivial offense, and we turn her down. One woman well dressed and prominent. The other, poor and ragged. One stole thousands,—the other, comparatively nothing. One we help, the other, we kick. What fools and inconsistent, insincere mortals we are! This kind of conduct is not even moral to say nothing of Christian.

CLEAN HOUSE

This Fall will be a troublesome time for Republican officeholders everywhere. It is even rumored that every appointee of Mr. Roosevelt in the Ninth District, is to lose his head. This is not likely the case. All the same, the Republicans have been in power already too long, and must go. Spring is the usual house-cleaning season but it is a good idea to clean house in the Fall if it needs it, and go into winter quarters with a clean house and healthful, sanitary surroundings. "Clean House" is the motto this year.

"I FORGOT IT"

The Superintendent of the Agricultural Department asked a farmer the other day if he had saved a bundle or so of his nice oats for the Fair. He said, "I forgot it." He intended doing so, but overlooked it when threshing time came. It is to be hoped that everybody will not be as this thoughtless citizen. Don't forget. This is the Peoples Show. Don't allow the little bob-tailed horses, shows and other amusements to take all your time.

CANNOT CHANGE DATE

Last week we wrote to Mr. Green, in Bland, suggesting that date of Reunion fixed for Sept. 13th, be changed, if possible, so as not to conflict with the Fair here. The following letter was received in reply from Mr. Chumbley, President of the U. D. C. Chapter:

Bland, Va.,
Aug. 27, 1910.
Mr. J. A. Leslie,
Dear Sir—
Mr. Green enclosed me your letter, asking us to change the date of our "Reunion." Now, nothing would give us more pleasure than to make the change if it was in our power to do so, but we have 24 crosses to bestow on that day. It is the last day that they can be bestowed this year. The next day is Jan. 19, that would be at a time of year that we could not have it, and our old veterans would be dreadfully disappointed if they did not get them now. This question was raised in our meeting this week, before your letter was received, but we found on account of the crosses it could not be changed. That was why it was fixed for that time. We consulted our by-laws before setting the date. We deeply regret the two coming together, as we would appreciate your people of Tazewell coming. Hope however, some of you may be able to get over. Besides the annual Reunion we will have the crosses to bestow and will lay our cornerstone. Rest assured we would gladly make the change were it possible for us to do so. Mr. Green said as the Camp had not fixed the date, they could not change it so he sent your letter to me as I am president of the "Bland" Chapter U. D. C. Hoping you will see at once why we cannot comply with your request, I remain,
Most Resp't,
Mrs. L. R. Chumbley.

Col. Roosevelt is having a great time in the west, camping on the trail of the corruptionist and corrupt "Captains of Industry." The Colonel has tackled, or pretended to tackle these same gentlemen before, here in the east, and how he handled them everybody knows. One is reminded of the cartoon of policemen brandishing a club with one hand, with the other open palm behind his back.

A prominent Republican said of Stuart's speech here, that he expressed opposition to the tariff laws now existing, but offered no remedy of his own. The Republicans have constantly opposed every move and plan of the Democrats to secure white rule in Virginia, but have never offered any plan of their own to secure it. Tell us how to bring it about.

We notice that the states having a primary have also a state convention. This is right. Virginia should follow the example set by her sister states. If a platform had been adopted last year there might possibly have been more unanimity on the Tariff question, and John Lamb not nominated this year.

A number of special premiums have been offered by the Tazewell Fair Association in the several departments not printed in the catalog. You stand a good chance to win one or more—as many as you can—of these premiums. Go after them.

The editor makes his annual statement that the Tariff on hides goes into effect in Tazewell next Monday. It is believed, however, that there is a decided and strong "Insurgent" element among the boys in school these days, the same as in politics.

Norfolk city and county is about on a par politically with certain sections of West Virginia. It is about time all such fools should be cleaned out and disinfecting.

We would judge, from a recent editorial in the Times Dispatch that the time had about arrived for that man Bailey to go home.

Instead of shooting Mr. Gaynor out as Mayor it seems probable he will be shot in as Governor, perhaps as President.

President or Proxy?

—New York World—

For the first time in the history of the United States a President persists. His term is out but he will not retire. His powers have expired, but his pretensions endure. A successor has been chosen, but he does not recognize the fact.

This is a condition of affairs which concerns the whole people but in particular it should arrest the attention of a gentleman named William Howard Taft. What is to be his attitude toward this person? Is Mr. Taft to be President in whole or in part? Is he to be President or Proxy?

It is noticeable that the ex-President's boastfulness assumed caute form immediately on the appearance of Mr. Taft's recent New York letter of explanation and apology. He wanted a fight right away. He wanted to clean up Lake Erie. He told what he intends to do with rich crooks and poor crooks. He said he would destroy the biggest business in the country on certain conditions. He gave orders to Gov. Harmon of Ohio. He taunted Wall Street. He girded at corporations. He drew heavily in other respects from his inexhaustible stock of bromides, all beginning with the capital I.

When this spectacular individual had place and power he talked in this fashion continuously—and did little else. That was his idea of being President. To denounce, to libel, to insult somebody, to attack business men sweepingly; to excite class prejudices; to brag and to menace; to stir up strife and to breed depressions and panics—such was his conception of Presidential duty and decorum.

Never before was there a President who insisted on being President in this or any other fashion after his term had expired. Mr. Taft is the first Chief Magistrate who has been called upon to deal with a rival, a claimant, a pretender, an intruder, an imposter.

Is William H. Taft to be a real President or is he to be a Proxy? A very short time will tell.

What Backache Means

Generally backache means that the kidneys are diseased. If they are, do not waste a moment, but begin at once a treatment with Kidneys, the greatest of kidney and backache remedies. Delay may mean a fatal ending so do not delay. Druggists and dealers sell Kidneys at 50c a box, and guarantee satisfactory results.

Hypocrisy

"For a man with Mr. Roosevelt's proved record, it is simply disgusting the humbug for him to rant about the corporations, upon whose treasures he fawned when he was President and wanted their money for his campaign. Does he think that nobody has a memory which goes back to the life insurance investigation, and that everybody has forgotten the $50,000 taken from widows and orphans and added to Theodore Roosevelt's political corruption fund? Did he not take a big check from the Beef Trust, and glad to get it? And now he is going to make the corporations come to time? One can have respect for a sincere radical, for an honest fanatic, for an agitator or faveiler, who believes that he is doing God's will; but it is hard to be patient with a man who talks big but acts mean, whose eye is always to the main, chance politically, and who lets no friendship, no generosity, no principle, no moral scruple, stand for a moment between himself and the goal upon which he has set his overmastering ambition."—New York Evening Post.

A Reliable Medicine—Not a Narcotic.

Mrs. F. Marti, St. Joe, Mich., says Foley's Honey and Tar saved her little boy's life. She says: "Our little boy contracted a severe bronchial trouble and as the doctor's medicine did not cure him, I gave him Foley's Honey and Tar in which I have great faith. It cured the cough as well as the choking and gagging spells, and he got well in a short time. Foley's Honey and Tar has many times saved us much trouble and we are never without it in the house." The President's Estimate of the Sunday School

"Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen of The World's Sunday School Association,—One remark of your presiding officer sank so deeply into my mind that I must comment upon it at once. I hope he will continue to play for the President of the United States. My experience is that is needed.

"It is a great honor to welcome to Washington, the City Beautiful, a world's convention at a time when the city is most beautiful. From all parts of the world we welcome here the representatives of one of the two or three great instrumentalities for making the world better, for making it more moral, and for making it more religious.

"As the twig is bent, so will the tree grow. Youth is the time to inculcate for lasting results moral and religious ideas. Our public school education, under the system which, with various denominations, we are obliged to adopt, is only secular teaching, with the teaching of morality in general. But that is not enough. There are those who feel as if it were dangerous to have education at all unless associated with religious education; but we in our country, under our system, have not found it practical to have public education associated with distinctly religious education. Therefore we feel, even more than in countries where that is possible, the necessity for Sunday schools.

"No matter what views are taken of general education, we will agree—Protestant, Catholic, and Jew alike—that Sunday school education is absolutely necessary to secure moral uplift and religious spirit.

"The invention of the Sunday school is accredited to Robert Raikes in 1780 or 1781. That there had been something equivalent to the Sunday school, in one form or another, for centuries before that is doubtless true, and I think history shows that we knew something of the Sunday school in this country before that time; but I think it was Mr. Raikes who pressed upon his countrymen the necessity for the use of this instrumentality in forwarding religion. At a time when he brought it for the Sunday schools had to supply some of the uses of the great public schools of today, but it is undoubtedly true that the impulse which he gave to religious thought and religious fervor in those days had much to do with adding to the revival of religion under the inspiration of the evangelists, and of Wesley and others, who made that revival in the eighteenth century so noteworthy.

"Adam Smith, Hannah More, and Rowland Hill, the man who gave us the postoffice in most of its useful features, introduced the Sunday school into London. It showed that Mr. Hill's mind was not only occupied with one means of spreading education, but that it also took up the subject of religious education as well. There were, as there will always be, in the spreading of any useful movement, conscientious members of the church who were opposed to the Sunday school; but they have disappeared.

"The spread of the Sunday school, the organization of the Sunday School Union, in 1785, and the counting of heads a few years later, showed 200,000 pupils in the schools. In this country the Sunday School Union and the spread of the Sunday school movement seems to have been even wider and more thorough than in any other part of the world—1,600,000 teachers and 13,500,000 pupils, against 1,000,000 teachers and 12,000,000 pupils in the rest of the world. A movement of such strength is one we ought to welcome in every community and testify to the respect we have for the good which it is doing.

"It seems a work of supererogation to talk about the advantage of beginning moral and religious instruction with the earliest youth. We do not have to convince each other that that which we learn in youth lasts longest with us.

"There is another great advantage connected with the Sunday school teaching, namely, that it commands without money and without price one eighth as many teachers as there are pupils, who give their time to this work. I want to say that I believe the influence of the Sunday school upon the teachers is in some respects even more beneficial than its influence upon the pupils. A boy or girl is a boy or girl. They take in moral lessons and they occasionally forget them. They learn their Bible verses, and some retain them, but many lose them. But the education that the teacher gets in preparing himself or herself to teach another, the responsibility that he assumes in developing the religious character of another, and the necessary depth and fervor of spirit which he must develop, if he is not a hypocrite, in trying to lead others, necessarily elevates him in a way which would be otherwise impossible.

"And now, my friends, I welcome you to Washington. I welcome you here with the hope that this convention, as the many others that you have had, may bring about a comparison of methods of teaching, an improvement in the methods of teaching, and an improvement in the way to awaken the hearts and souls of your little pupils, and that you may carry away from Washington the feeling that this meeting has done something to make progress in the great work of which you are guardians throughout the world.

"The reference of your distinguished president to the death of the late king, and the feeling of mourning which it awakened on both sides of the ocean, brings to mind how much such a world's convention as this means in the perpetuation of the peace of nations and the love of each for the other."

He Made Them Come To Time

"I will make the corporations come to time," shouted Mr. Roosevelt at Toledo.

He made the Equitable Life come to time with a $50,000 campaign contribution.

He made the Beef Trust come to time with a big campaign contribution.

He made the Standard Oil come to time with another big campaign contribution.

He made E. H. Harriman, after a personal conference at the White House, come to time with $250,000.

These are only a few of the corporations and plutocratic interests Mr. Roosevelt made come to time in the 1904 campaign when he was a candidate for the Presidency to succeed himself.

Politeness—A Business Asset

"Politeness is a business asset at the command of every girl who must earn her own living," says Anna Steese Richardson in the September Woman's Home Companion.

"She may not be as expert with the typewriter, the sewing machine or the drafting tools as her fellow worker, but she can always hold her own when it comes to courtesy. She may not be able to wear as smart tailored suits and blouses as the girl at the next desk, but she can be just as polite or more so. She may lack the strong personality which is such a factor in scoring business success, but if she will cultivate politeness, the much coveted personality will develop.

"You can say 'good morning' to the elevator starter, or the elevator operator, in a way that will make him say to a chum after you pass, 'There goes a lady, a real lady.'

"You can say 'good morning' to the little red headed office boy who puts down your 'time,' in a way that will make him say to the little cash girl or messenger with whom he is always scrapping: 'Say, if you was like her, I'd marry you some day.'

"You can say 'good morning' to your employer in a way that will make him realize that you are a credit to his establishment, a womanly girl, not a human machine whose sole office is to turn out so many circulars a day.

"You can say 'good morning' and 'thank you' and 'please' as you go through your day's work to the fresh young bookkeeper to the tired young file clerk, to the irritable caller, to the man-in-search-of-a-job, in the same simple, unaffected, sincere way, until politeness becomes a habit, and the drudgery of earning your own living is transformed into the joy of independence, and those among whom you work look for your coming with pleasure, which, after all, is one of the rewards of living. We all love appreciation, and politeness wins appreciation as the sun draws flowers from the earth."

Mrs. Jacob Wilmet, Lincoln, Ill., found her way back to perfect health. She writes, "I suffered with kidney trouble and backache and my appetite was very poor at times. A few weeks ago I got Foley Kidney pills and gave them a fair trial. They gave me great relief, so continued until now I am in perfect health. For sale at Jacksons.
